Market Overview

Fund Highlights

- The fund returned 6.96% for the month, 88bps ahead of the index.
- Positive contributors to fund performance over the month Carlisle Companies, AdaptHealth and Solar Edge Technologies.
- Main detractors included AIA Group, Palomar and Progressive Corp.

Market Commentary

July saw equity markets rebound following the sharp losses seen in recent months. Equity markets enjoyed their best month of the year, rising more than 5%. The catalyst for this reversal in performance was a sense that weak economic data and a potential peak being reached in near-term inflation could cause the Federal Reserve to slow the pace of monetary tightening. Growth outperformed value this month. Weakening economic data served to undermine confidence in earnings estimates for some of those cyclical businesses that had benefited the most from the market rotation seen in Q1. At the same time, lower expected inflation fed through into slightly reduced interest rate expectations. This released some of the valuation multiple pressure faced by growth stocks this year. In terms of the inflation picture and the Fed’s response, the economic data remained mixed in July. Commodity prices have corrected fairly sharply in many cases, in sympathy with falling business confidence. It is fair to say, however, that the US consumer has held up relatively well so far – likely underpinned by a solid labour market and relatively low levels of leverage going into whatever economic slowdown we are facing.

Fund Commentary

The fund returned 6.96% for the month 88bps ahead of the index. Positive contributors to fund performance over the month Carlisle Companies, AdaptHealth and Solar Edge Technologies. Carlisle Companies shares rose following strong quarterly results. Earnings came in above expectations due to a strong operating performance. Importantly, demand remains robust in construction materials and management commented that orders are now booking out into 2023. Signs of recovery in aerospace and medical were also encouraging, and the shares could see further upside from capital deployment opportunities. AdaptHealth continued to recover from deeply oversold levels due to increasing confidence that supply chain stress is easing somewhat in CPAP. Certainly, CPAP devices have been competing with consumer electronics for semiconductors in recent months. Now that demand for consumer electronics is starting to cool off, there is greater availability of semis for less cyclical devices, such as CPAP. SolarEdge Technologies, and other stocks related to the renewable energy sector, surged in the last week of July after Senator Joe Manchin and Majority Leader Chuck Schumer announced a deal that would see spending of approximately $369 billion on climate and energy proposals. Main detractors included AIA Group, Palomar and Progressive Corp. AIA Group underperformed in July due to China lockdowns significantly disrupting business in key markets, and a slower business recovery in ASEAN countries despite large, local reopening. As the pace of recovery picks up later in the year, we should see an improvement in new business value. Palomar shares struggled to perform this month in sympathy with the broader insurance sector. Bond yields have been slightly softer in recent weeks as investors speculate that we may be at ‘peak’ inflation and benign monetary policy has increased. Despite these dynamics, we continue to view Palomar as a high-quality player within the insurance industry. Progressive shares declined in July. Results were reasonable, but the company’s rich valuation provided little room for disappointment. Furthermore, investors are concerned about deterioration in credit risk given the high-risk exposure of Progressive’s investment portfolio. Despite this, we believe Progressive’s superior data analytics and digital distribution platform are key competitive advantages that should drive top-tier margins and returns over time.
